To the Registrar, "Jute"

Dear Sir:

Pursuant to the requirements in connection with the copyrighting of motion pictures other than photoplays not reproduced in copies for sale, we try to give a brief and concise description of the work.

The series of views are intended to convey the cultivation of Jute in India through its various stages of growth, up to the shipping point at Calcutta, after which views taken in the United States, commencing with the arrival of the carrying vessels in Philadelphia, through the various stages of its manufacture in the plant of The Schlichter Jute Cordage Co., Frankford, Philadelphia, Pa., culminating in views of cordage ready for sale.

Briefly, the views taken in India represent breaking the soil, sowing, harrowing, weeding, retting, sorting, packing and shipping. The views taken in the United States are those of the arrival of the carrying vessel above mentioned, of the plant of The Schlichter Jute Cordage Co., the departments in that company's Mill showing the process of manufacture, - namely, batching and carding, operations of roving frames, and spinning frames, converting the yarns into twines, as shown in the views of twisters; also, converting the twisted yarn by plying several strands into rope as shown by views of the rope making machine.

These are succeeded by views of the packing departments, in which are shown balling machines, hanking machines, baling machines and those of the shipping departments.

There is nothing special in the manufacturing to comment upon, other than the material we use is exclusively Jute, which entirely comes from India, and the spinning operations, in many ways, resemble those used in flax or cotton mills.

We hope this brief description is what you require, and remain

Yours very truly,

THE SCHLICHTER JUTE CORDAGE CO.
